Taste or gustation is one of the five traditional senses including hearing, sight, touch and smell. Humans can distinguish five basic tastes. Each and every one of them is a message that tells us something about what we put into our mouth, so we can decide whether it should be eaten. A sweet taste can signal the presence of natural sugars and other carbohydrates found in many fruits and honey. They play an important role in giving and storing energy. Salty foods usually signal the presence of sodium. This element is necessary for maintaining our bodies' water balance and circulating the flow of blood and nutrients. Bitter tastes can signal the presence of 35 different proteins found in plants. However, some of them are unpleasant to taste and can be toxic. A sour taste can signal the presence of acidic solutions like lemon juice and organic acids. Acids may indicate that food is no longer healthy and suitable to eat. Umami or savoury comes from protein building blocks (amino acids) found naturally in protein-rich foods like meats and cheese.

It is not easy to work in the fragrance industry. Perfumers need an extraordinary sense of smell and a solid knowledge of chemistry, in addition to completing specialist studies in perfumery. Normally, it takes ten years of studies and training to be recruited a professional perfumer.

Some consider perfumers as experts in chemistry and gas chromatography. In fact, they must be able to analyze chemical substances that form the additives in the fragrance and make detailed analysis of aromatic chemicals, as well as perform physical tests. At higher levels, they also take quality control measures and get involved in the preparation of a fragrance to make sure that the manufacturing process conforms to safety standards.

As any other jobs, a perfumer may encounter challenges at work. It may be the problem of low engagement. Consumers do not engage in the perfume industry as much as they used to, because many brands focus on producing commonplace fragrances in large quantities. This results in the same products from different brands, or market saturation. As a result, perfumers are required to work harder to create their brands' signature fragrances.

Becoming a perfumer is a career choice. It thrusts you into an incredible world of unexpected, original and timeless scents. It also gives you a chance to let your creativity and imagination run wild as you develop fragrances that may become global success.

True/False Questions:

26. Professional perfumers need natural talents and certain knowledge.

A. True B. False

27. Becoming a perfumer is not a long process.

A. True B. False

28. Many brands are now mass-producing their unique perfumes.

A. True B. False

Choose the correct answer to each question:

29. What does the passage mainly discuss?

A. The most popular perfume brands

B. How to create a perfume

C. Creativity

D. Perfumer job

30. Which job does a perfumer NOT participate in?

A. performing physical tests

B. taking quality control measures

C. analyze chemical substances

D. prepare safety standards

Sign languages are visual languages that use hand gestures, body movements, and facial expressions to communicate. They are not universal and differ from country to country. Sign languages have their own grammar, syntax, and vocabulary, just like spoken languages. They are used by millions of people worldwide, including the deaf community and people with hearing impairments.

Sign languages are not just a mode of communication, but also an important part of the cultural identity of the deaf community. They are used to tell stories, express emotions, and convey complex ideas. Sign languages have been recognized as official languages in many countries, and efforts are being made to provide education and resources to deaf people to learn and use sign languages.

However, sign languages still face many challenges, including limited access to education and employment opportunities in some countries, as well as a lack of recognition and support from some governments and societies. Despite these challenges, sign languages continue to thrive and evolve, enriching the lives of those who use them and promoting greater inclusivity and diversity in our world.
