This course is exceptional. Why? Because the greatest advice from professionals and extremely successful people has been compiled into this course on four of the most important life skills needed to succeed in today's quickly changing world. This course covers guidance as well as the scientific basis. The objectives are below:

- 1. Goal-setting - Students will learn the importance of having a goal in life by regularly creating, updating, and following a plan to attain both long-term and short-term goals. They will also learn how to create goals that provide focus, motivation, and verifiable progress.
- 2. Networking - A majority of people are aware that a person's career success may be greatly impacted by their network. Having the ability to network will not only help them get a job more quickly, but it will also provide them with a competitive advantage throughout their whole career. Students will learn how to create and maintain a network of peers and business leaders in this segment, which will help them as they advance their careers.

3. Accepting mistakes and Growing from them -The most successful people have demonstrated that experiencing failures early is the key to success. The secret is standing up after failing and continuing on. Students will discover why failure is acceptable, why it's crucial to make an attempt to learn from failure, and how to record this process.

4. Happiness and Mental Health - An increasing number of colleges are now providing courses that are designed to help students live happier lives. Although today's pupils are better educated and well-rounded than those in past generations, they appear to be much less resilient. Students will learn scientifically validated methods to help them achieve their goal of living happier, more fulfilling lives in this course section.

26. Whose advice has been incorporated into developing the course?

- A. workers B. successful people C. professional sport people
