Millions of people play games for fun. However, there are professional gamers. They practise for ten or more hours a day, five or six days a week. They earn money by playing competitive computer games, or e-sports!

Then, are e-sports really sports? Some say no. E-sports players don't need to run, jump, throw or do big physical actions. At the moment, the UK government classifies e-sports as kinds of games, not as sports. But others say yes: e-sports are sports. Players do need some physical skills, especially hand–eye coordination, quick reaction. They also need to be accurate and good at timing. In fact, the governments of China and South Korea classify e-sports as sports, and they will be an official medal sport in the Asian Games starting from 2022.

IV. Read the description of three robotics competitions. Tick the correct competition.

B.E.S.T Robot Contest

What can high school students do with a box of materials and six weeks? The B.E.S.T Robot Contest is a great way to find out. Teams must design a robot that can successfully complete a set of tasks within a time limit, and they'll compete against each other.

F.I.R.S.T: Tech Challenge

Teams for the F.I.R.S.T: Tech Challenge can have up to 15 high schoolers. There's a reusable robot kit. They must use this kit to create a robot that will be able to compete in an alliance format challenge. Teams work with adult coaches and mentors to help them.

National Robotics Challenge

The National Robotics Challenge doesn't require specific materials or a kit. Stu- dents get to build a robot that can compete in challenges like a maze and rescue. Plus, the contest isn't just for school students; college and graduate students can participate, too.
