Unusual homes

[A] Brazilian artists Tiago Primo and his brother Gabriel live on a climbing wall on the side of a building in Rio de Janeiro. There aren't any stairs or a lift, so they have to climb from one 'room' to the next. The 'house' has got a hammock to sleep in instead of a bed, but the brothers have to use the bathroom in the art gallery next door.

[B] Another artist, Moussa Kalo, designed the Crocodile House in Abidjan, capital of the Ivory Coast. He built it with the help of his apprentice, Thierry Atta, who wanted to become an artist like him. The house looks like a large crocodile, but there's enough space inside for a bedroom. Mr Kalo died before it was finished, but Thierry completed it, and then went to live there.

[C] Czech builder Bohumil Lhota isn't an artist, but people say that his house is a work of art. The 73-year-old was bored with building ordinary houses, so he designed a new place in a village to the north of Prague. Mr Lhota's house turns around, so that he can choose the view that he wants. He can also move it up and down by pushing a switch.

[D] Liu Lingchao's house also moves, but that is because he is carrying it. The house is made of bamboo, pieces of plastic and bed sheets, and it weighs around 60 kg. Mr Liu collects used water bottles on the road and sells them at the next town he gets to. He travels all over southern China and he carries everything he needs with him.
